

Meredith community,

As we near the end of July, here's the latest information about your fall semester at Meredith. Today's briefing includes information about how to make class schedule changes, understanding course formats, how the contact tracing process will work at Meredith, and daily self-screening requirements.

Class Formats

Information about the format for each class being offered this Fall is listed in WebAdvisor. Definitions for the different formats (modalities) available this year can be found on MyMeredith or in this helpful guide from Meredith's Registrar.

Contact Tracing

One of the key steps in limiting the spread of Covid-19 is contact tracing. Meredith's contact tracing process is explained on the Staying Strong website:

Covid System Monitoring App

Daily self-monitoring for Covid-19 symptoms will be required for students and employees prior to coming to campus. Students living in residence halls and the Oaks are also asked to self-screen on a daily basis to protect those who live on campus.

To facilitate the daily screening process, Meredith intends to use the Campus Clear app. This free app provides a short, intuitive survey that takes less than 10 seconds to complete on a daily basis. Users type in their email address to create an account and will log in daily to answer a question about their symptoms. The privacy of each user is protected and their information is only accessible to key health officials of the College who are leading contract tracing efforts. Campus Clear is available for free in the Apple Store and on Google Play. More information about Campus Clear will be posted soon on the Staying Strong site and included in a future email briefing.

Thank you for your continued attention to our Fall 2020 email updates. Meredith's Incident Response Team continues to monitor circumstances and the latest guidance related to Covid-19 and make decisions accordingly. Continue to check your email and visit www.meredith.edu/staying-strong for the most up-to-date information.

Stay Strong,
